What's Going on in the World Today

How It Applies to Each of Us

J smile sometimes and say "Maybe the Myans are right!--The End is nigh!" Certainly the world that most of us knew growing up is long gone, and huge changes are happening every day.

Personally, I don't sweat it--it's all interesting, a great spectator sport to me, and, lol, I have nothing to lose.

Lately a few people have asked me how this all fits into the Picture of Man; others have worked it out for themselves.

One person blames, among others, banks, and he makes a good case that what people are taught about banks and banking are outright lies. Some think the encroaching socialism is the end of life as we know it. Another wonders what kind of greedy insanity allowed people to think they could afford mansions on low incomes. There is plenty of "blame" to go around... I think that misses the point.

Certainly there are lots of events right now that we don't like. And certain things appear to be getting "worse" and are even frightening if one identifies with them. And that is the key--"identifying with them." If we are truly interested in being students of The Way of Intelligence, we must look at it differently, and stop thinking our pet peeves have any validity whatsoever in the Big Scheme--sorry, they don't.

I don't know what is more grounding than an understanding of the Four Great Questions:

What am I?

Where am I?

What's going on here?

What can I do (about it), if anything?

Now if you answer these questions with some form of the following, you are going to be unhappy indeed. Example:

What am I? "I am a citizen."

Where am I? "(Name your democracy) with inalienable rights," meaning, for instance, the way it's laid out in your constitution will never change.

What's going on here? "My rights are being violated."

What can I do? "Revolt, complain, blame, or maybe even get on the bandwagon and champion these changes."

If you are a student, aiming, of course, to be in charge of your inner state, how does the above point of view affect you? Can you possibly believe those answers and be serene? Not angry? or not in a state of rebel-rousing excitement? I don't think so.

The Bigger Picture is this:

"What am I?" I am spirit or spiritual intelligence in human form.

"Where am I?" In a realm of challenge, a realm of huge forces.

"What's going on here?" More or less a degree of chaos, which, if I am identified with the Four Dual Basic Urges, will tear me up. If I see the Big Picture and don't identify:

I can meet challenge, get out of the way of violence, take in stride what I cannot change, and continue my efforts to be in charge of MY inner state--most especially when there is nothing I can do about the outer state of things when they are huge. (And when enough are in charge of their inner state, that will spread, things WILL change to a more agreeable condition.)

I can see that what I really want is some degree of comfort, and am prone to blame those that prevent it; I am prone to this but don't have to act on it. Enough awareness of this, and I won't even be prone to it (one day, lol).

The human experience is to be in a world where there are gigantic forces at work. They all boil down to Four Forces, of course (Initiative, Resistance, Form, Result) but can be seen as a little more specific than that: Among others, there are huge forces of violence, manifest in everything from warfare, terrorism, exploitation of people including children, domestic power plays and more.

There are huge destructive forces, which can be seen as sometimes necessary for creativity, if one cares to examine them, looking at the Bigger Picture. There was a wonderful TV show recently, called "The Universe" and one episode showed the creation of our beautiful estate, Planet Earth. It was born out of almost unimaginable destruction and violence, and thanks to computer-generated graphics, showed a distinct picture of creation amidst the chaos. In fact, while watching it, I realized little boys' predilection to blowing things up and knocking things over is part of a primal creative instinct!

Another great force is Ig-NOR-ance--I heard someone pronounce "ignorance" that way once and thought it a beautiful expression--no longer is an ignorant person a mere victim of whatever, but is purposely not paying attention. (And conversely, there are some things we want to ignore, of course.)

The force of Suggestion is behind most of it. Threats and Promises that appeal to the Four Dual Basic Urges--perfectly human urges but NOT the whole purpose of living. They are by-products or side-effects of living. That's one way to see the difference between nature-made-manifest, and intentional nastiness: is there an emotional threat or promise included? If one lives in hurricane territory, one hears about the threat of the next big one, knows to get out of harm's way. This is "what is," not what we mean by suggestion. If your nose tells you the food in front of you is tainted, you're not going to eat it.

In other words, some things ARE real threats, and we do well to heed them. We might call them "natural" threat. The suggestion we are interested in recognizing as threat or promise requires you to do something and/or to give something to someone else, a person, a group, an institution. It means you are not in charge of your action, the suggestor is.

The short version is this: If you are a student, you are, like everyone else, in a realm of challenge, and have a "weakness" to identify with the senses, i.e., the 4 Dual Basic Urges. Lots of work on this weakness will banish it. The content of your challenges, though possibly interesting, is really of no importance at all; whether you react mechanically or learn to respond consciously is all that matters. No matter what is going on.

If the folks lying about banks annoy you (or worse), your challenge is dealing with the annoyance. If the Constitution being ripped up dismays you (as it does me sometimes), dealing with making such things important is the challenge. (And before you zap me a nasty email, lol, understand that I certainly see that though nothing is important, many things ARE valuable!) If your father's alcoholism breaks your heart, then strengthening your heart, and letting people have the same privilege to choose for themselves as you do, is the challenge.

Why not list a few things that drive you nuts, and see if they are truly important in their own right (since they obviously aren't to the people who perpetuate them), and what your REAL challenge might be:

Role-playing

Excerpts from a talk by Rhondell

So, when we see What I Am, we have the grounds to be screaming with joy. You know, you might use one of these words, to say "thank you" is kind of blah--to me, that I am spirit. Indwelling a body, and an awareness. It has an awareness function. Now then, that is being conscious. That's waking up, out of a sleep that the human race has been in for ages upon ages upon ages. It's walking out of it, it's coming up where you can see things.

And we talked last night that you could increase this consciousness by consciously acting out different roles, preferably some opposing to each other, right quick. Not because it's necessary to act out the roles, but it's necessary to wake up. And the only time we're really awake is when we're consciously acting out a role. That really is the only time we're awake. The rest of the time we're kind of a walking sleep going about. Just mechanically reacting to one stimulus and then another stimulus and another stimulus and another stimulus. All kind of electronic devices will do that, right? They'll react. Every one of us everyday probably walks through one of these little things that says you broke the line and the door opens, or you step on something and the door opens. You wouldn't say that thing is intelligence, or a living thing, but it is sensing and reacting. And we can turn ourselves into machines if we like.

But we much prefer to be living beings. So when we're seeing that, you have every reason to be filled with joy. So what is an exclamation of joy? Eureka! is one of them. Glory! is one of them. Hallelujah! is one of them. So forth--you don't have to go around screaming out on the street, because there's a lot of people out there that's mechanical that would probably think you should be locked up. But you could sure be rattling it inside your head. That it's going on that here we have discovered we are a unit. What am I? We are a unit, a conscious unit now, because we are discovering what I am. I am spirit indwelling a body, with an awareness function.

So can you begin to see and could you say to yourself, and then ACT upon it, "I am spirit indwelling a body with an awareness function."? or you could call it a personality. You know we all have, as well as different bodies, we have different personalities. So, say that I am spirit indwelling a physical body with a personality. Okay?

So we can begin to be conscious and develop consciousness, we can play an active role. it said if you hear about something, if you act upon it you can do it, it becomes very proficient in a while. You become extremely conscious. And you don't have to go through all this conflict, "Well, should I do this or should I do that," it's there, it's done, like that. Spontaneous. Quick. Now. And we don't have to go through all the struggle and resistance and we don't have to think that every little discomfort I have is something bad and that no doubt that I'm getting something.

And all that [illness] is so unessential. What we want to be is conscious. Just developed. And what we're talking about is to develop this personality so that it is an excellent intelligence corp [reporting to X], okay? A person works on it, you work on it by acting on something. What you going to act on? You're going to act on that you are spirit, and that you're acting out roles. That's all I can do. I don't know anything to do that's not a role, do you?

Tell me something that I could come up with that wasn't a role to play, okay? Search me, I don't know. So there isn't anything else we can do. But we can do that. But that requires that I pay attention and I give up this whole purpose of living to be nondisturbed. That's the one that's hard--that's your pet that you really hate to give up, you know.

You need lots of RAM and a good graphics card, and the ability to be free to feel stupid (there is a considerable learning curve... half the people I've invited have chickened out after one visit, lol. If you're interested, please email me at HarmonyWorkshop@earthlink.net for further information.

Thank you!

Hearfelt thanX to all of you who support our work, including an anonymous angel in or via Albuquerque. I thought you might be interested to know where your money goes. I've said for years that when I put the newsletter in the mail, it might as well be going into a black hole unless I hear otherwise. Now that we are online, and "the Picture of Man is available to the whole world," I am continually amazed and delighted to find people ARE interested. We have had inquiries from all over North America, Scandinavia, France, Italy, Argentina, Australia, South Africa, the Orient and a few weeks ago, from Latvia! The last one I wouldn't even have known about except that someone was having technical trouble downloading our Picture of Man tutorial video (at www.PictureofMan.com) and asked for assistance. I ask how they found the site, and I hope you are as tickled as I was to hear the answer: "I did a search for 'purpose of living' and found your site. The video is excellent, I have been sharing it with my colleagues." All these sites and especially the new 3-D sim cost plenty, and I thank everyone who donates to keep this material "out there," a by-product of which is helping me to keep a promise. Thank you, thank you.

Nothing is Important--Check It Out

We used to print up stickers and paste them in public restrooms (oops! maybe NOT good guests?) that said:

The Secret to Living: Keeping the Mood Up and Not Making Anything Important.

The theme of this newsletter (and the last one--please do read Pronoia to gain some balance vis-a-vis the "news") is all the disturbing stuff going on in our world right now, and how to see it as merely challenge, nothing really threatening.

People I've talked to lately DO see the deterioration of our standard of living as important, and I understand that they feel that way. (I also talk to a few people who DON'T make it important.) And I DO agree a high standard of living is of value.

Rhondell said he was asked to boil all the principles down into the shortest possible phrasing, and came up with the message on our sticker.

"Easy for you to say," and such comments, is what I get. (Why Work might be 'easy for me' is someone's dream! Or, maybe having no kids helps, lol.) Well, let me present a little experiment and maybe it will be easier for you.

What if someone could absolutely convince you that Nothing is Important? Well, I can't, and actually, wouldn't even try, because it's up to you to see it. But here's how you might approach it; it's an experiment, which means you start it and you can stop it whenever you wish.

Use your imagination for a few minutes. Choose something you are particularly worried about (and it IS imaginative, because you are alive and well and sitting here reading a newsletter. Whatever it is, it's "on hold" at least for these few minutes.) Now imagine how you would feel if it were completely solved, or gone, or, if you're afraid of loss, that it is guaranteed permanent. How do you feel? FEELING IS THE MEDIUM OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN

X AND AWARENESS. Your little fantasy that there is nothing to worry about, if you did it honestly, has given you the feeling that "All is well," or "nothing to worry about," or "IT IS NO LONGER IMPORTANT."

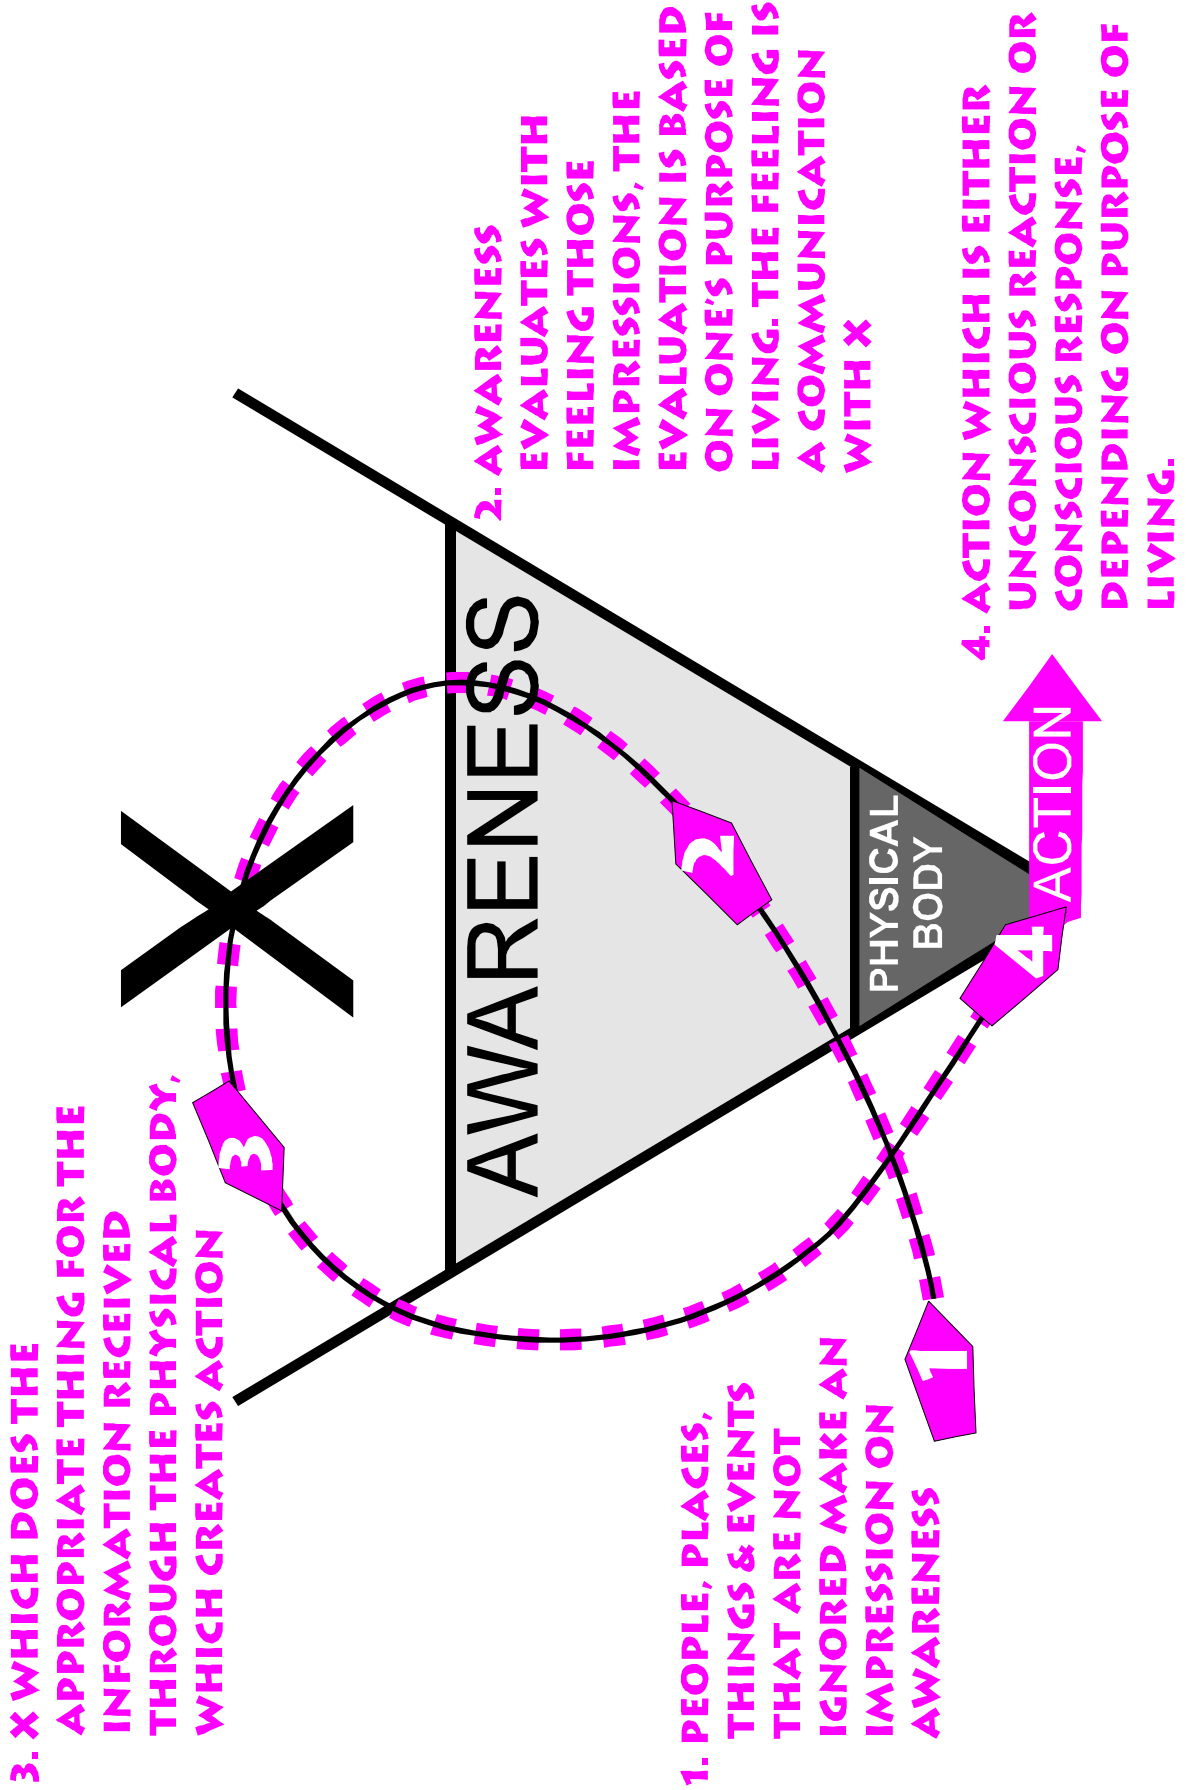

Now if you're really interested in this experiment, go to the last newsletter and look at the Picture of Man Choosing What to Value. You will then understand what imagining this feeling (and hanging on to it for, say, five minutes) can actually do for you.

Yes, we are inclined to take things personally, that's certainly part of the human experience. We like or don't like the feelings that certain things generate. But in the Bigger Scheme of Things nothing is really personal, and nothing is really important. If you can let go of ego for five minutes and find and really "get into" the feeling of knowing this, you will have a tremendous tool at hand for growth, and not just growth, but evolvment and maybe even transformation.

This issue contains a Picture of Man which shows a human being in a realm of huge forces. Recognizing them as huge forces and not just personal annoyances is the key to not letting them upset your inner state.

You will notice that they are games you can play--or not. I was listening to all the political Sunday talk shows yesterday and, when you see several in a row, you see that indeed, some people love to play war games. And you are welcome to do so. You can play any game you want to. But some are very, very dangerous. An analogy came to mind: that of surfing, especially in Australia or Hawaii, wherever the humongous waves are. If you are experienced and confident, you are free to surf them to your heart's content. If you are neither experienced nor confident, and find yourself there, you'd better enjoy the waves in a sturdy boat, or watch from a distance. Choose wisely.

SUPER SIMPLE PICTURE OF MAN IN CONFLICT

- 1. WHEN THE WHOLE PURPOSE OF LIVING IS TO GAIN/ESCAPE, THERE IS CONFLICT, BECAUSE 100%GAIN/100%ESCAPE IS NOT POSSIBLE.
- 2. WHEN AWARENESS IS IN CONFLICT, WE HAVE A FEELING OF EMERGENCY, AND THAT FEELING IS "REPORTED" TO X.
- 3. X DOES THE APPROPRIATE THING FOR EMERGENCY, SENDS ENERGY TO FIGHT OR FLEE.
- 4. BECAUSE THE EMERGENCY WAS FALSE, THIS ENERGY IS USED EITHER IN UNUSUAL BEHAVIOR, OR IN INNER ADAPTATION (SYMPTOMS).

ADAPTATIONS CAN BE UNCOMFORTABLE; WE FEAR PAIN, AND THE WHOLE THING STARTS ALL OVER AGAIN. UNUSUAL BEHAVIOR USUALLY ATTRACTS DISAPPROVAL, ETC. (AD/OR IS DANGEROUS); WE FEAR DISAPPROVAL, AND THE WHOLE THING STARTS OVER AGAIN.

THE WAY of Intelligence

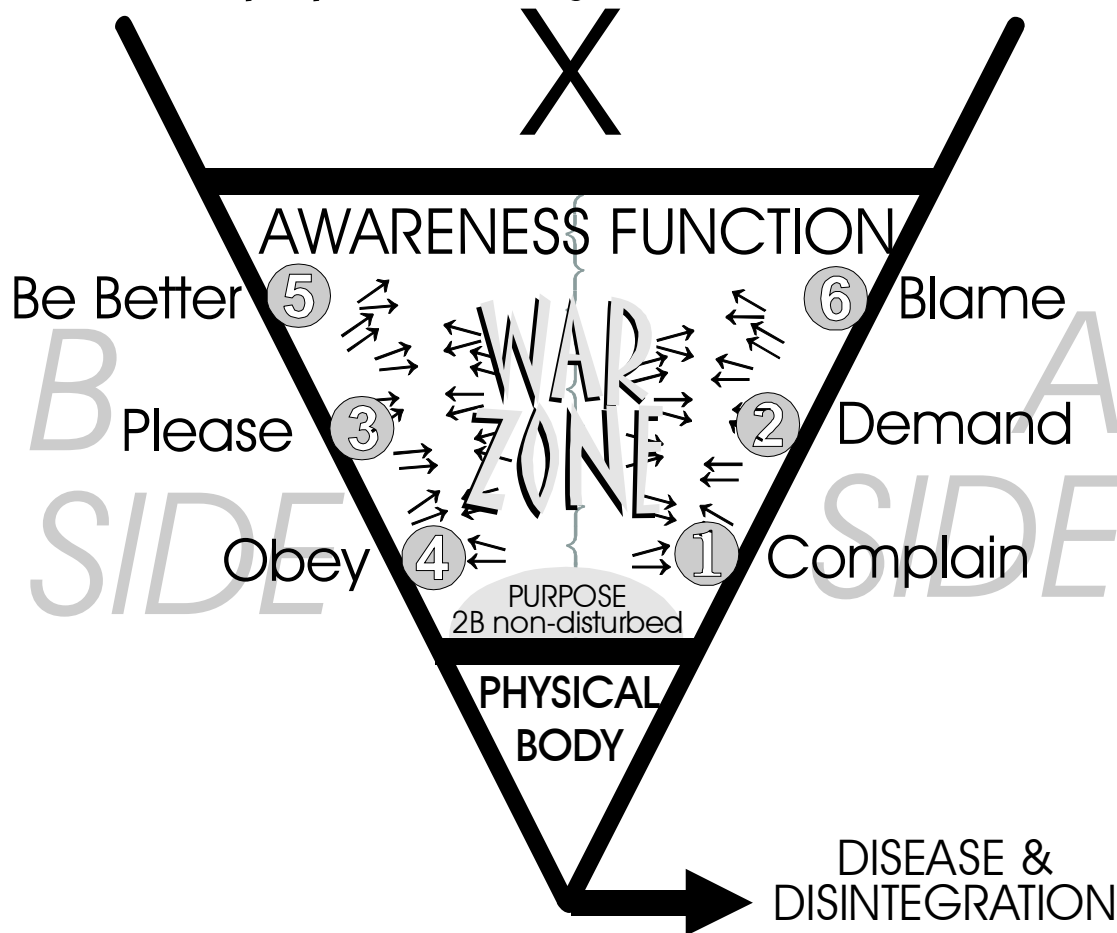

THE PICTURE OF MAN as designed to function

A human being has four aspects, which are not separate but are interdependent. The first is the biological aspect of LIFE FORCE, called X here because it is not really definable--one knows it's there, one knows when it isn't, in any creature. So, as in algebra, an X is used to denote that something is there which cannot yet be precisely defined. Next is the AWARENESS FUNCTION, which is the senses but more than the senses when developed. A developed Awareness Function is more than the "programming" of the brain, it determines feelings. The third aspect is the MOTOR FUNCTION, the PHYSICAL BODY through which life is lived. The fourth aspect is the ACTIVITY of the whole. When a single-minded purpose is the foundation of a person's life, there is no conflict and he or she functions with all aspects in harmony. The person is at ease.. The Awareness Function receives impressions from within and without, from other people, places, things, events. It forms a feeling about those impressions which it does not choose to ignore, and the feeling is in tune with the purpose of living. The feeling of Awareness is a medium of communication with the Life Force, X, which responds appropriately through the Physical Body to the information received, and Action ensues.

The Way of the World

with purpose of living to be non-disturbed

Few people function as the human being was designed as in the previous diagram. When an infant is born, the trauma of leaving the non-disturbed uterine world is reacted to with a feeling that the whole purpose of living is to regain the non-disturbed state. That decision becomes the attitude and action from then on. As he grows, the child makes more decisions as to how to gain his purpose of non-disturbance. He complains, which works for an infant. When one day this fails to work, he sticks up for his "rights", or demands non-disturbance. (These begin the A-side of the Picture of Man.) Eventually he finds that pleasing people sometimes gets him his way. (This begins the B-side.) At this point conflict sets in. He wants to cry "but" feels he "should" please. Then he sees parents, teachers, others as authorities. This is understandable for a child and helps keep him safe. It is not adult behavior, however. The continual conflict between what he wants to do and what he "should" do (conflict between A-side and B-side) intensifies and he feels if he would improve, things would be better. This doesn't work, either, and he blames everyone and everything for his disturbances, living in conflict, except when distracted. Conflict is felt by the Awareness Function to be an emergency. This false emergency is communicated to the Life Force, X, which always does the appropriate thing FOR THE INFORMATION RECEIVED, in this case supplying energy to fight or run. If this mobilized energy is not used in violent activity, it disintegrates the body; using emergency energy in a non-emergency is unusual behavior; neither is harmonious living. Eventually disintegration ensues.

Thousands of dolphins block Somali pirates

BEIJING, April 14 (Xinhuanet) -- Thousands of dolphins blocked the suspected Somali pirate ships when they were trying to attack Chinese merchant ships passing the Gulf of Aden, the China Radio International reported on Monday.

The Chinese merchant ships escorted by a China's fleet sailed on the Gulf of Aden when they met some suspected pirate ships. Thousands of dolphins suddenly leaped out of water between pirates and merchants when the pirate ships headed for the China's.

The suspected pirates ships stopped and then turned away. The pirates could only lament their littleness before the vast number of dolphins. The spectacular scene continued for a while.

Awareness Feels the "What" and X Does the "How"

A postcard from Life

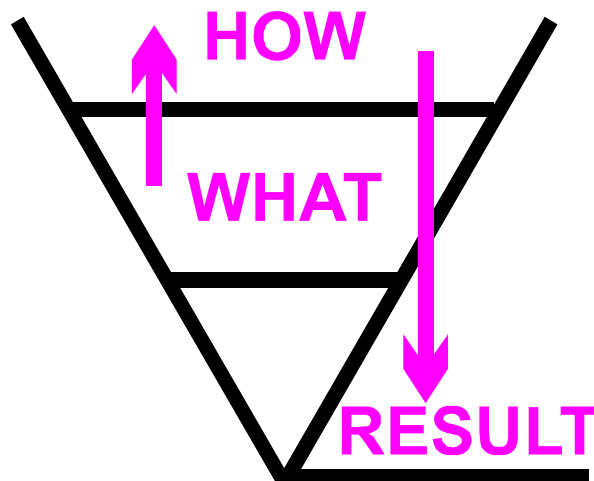

I've said many times that the Big Games of the world (Power Policies, Big Business, Medical Arts, Theology) are, to me, fascinating spectator sports. I've been tickling "the little gray cells" about the piracy situation, wondering what would be both the best strategy to become in charge of it without warmongering. A bit of a conundrum, to say the least. (I see the U.S. Constitution as the declaration of the Purpose of a unique experiment by Life in Its human experience.)

Today I got a Postcard from Life and laughed out loud. While I was busy churning away at the "how," there was a lovely demonstration of an alternative solution I would never have dreamed of. (See the dolphin story on page 15.) Although of course this isn't likely a permanent solution (but who knows?), it was such a perfect example of the principle, "Awareness feels the what, X does the how." Understanding this principle is the key to letting go, the key to not making things important, the key to peace of mind, the key to making up the mind. And a big relief.

When Awareness is contaminated with the master decision to gain/escape, and its six helpmeets complaining, demanding, pleasing for effect, quoting and obeying so-called authorities, self-improving and blaming, it can't possibly be sending a proper "request" of "what" to X, because it is in conflict and too busy warring within (and without). X feels the conflict as an emergency, so rather than creative action (to the "request") it supplies energy to fight or flee, we usually do neither, we stew instead, and nothing happens but adaptation to the unused emergency energy, with symptoms or craziness.

Now while the principle is to turn it over to the proper aspect (X) to DO, it doesn't mean to just la-di-da and wait, twiddling one's thumbs. We must do our homework, that is the First Step that gets the action of X going. For instance, if we want a new job, we don't just wish for one and sit and wait for them to knock on the door and beg us to grace them with our presence. We get the resume in order, make a few calls, whatever it is that gets the ball rolling.

If you make up your mind to sell your house, you advertise the fact, shine it up a bit, whatever it takes to get that ball rolling.

And if we've made up our mind, it WILL unfold, if we remember that Awareness does the WHAT, X does the HOW.

So next time you're overwhelmed, thinking you just can't get something done, or you don't know how, or that it's hopeless, remember the dolphins, smile out loud, get that ball rolling and get out of the way--it's about to Happen!!

I'd like to make this a regular feature of the newsletter, "X works in wondrous ways," so keep your eye out for similar articles, and please send me the link, or let me know about it. (One I remember from some years ago was the panic about the ozone hole growing, and then a few months later, an article that some kind of gasses had moved right to the ozone hole and plugged it up. I laughed out loud at that one, too. Be on the lookout for such goings-on and let me know about the, and thank you.)

"Good & Evil... Compassion... Understanding... Role-playing..."

Excerpts from a letter from a friend:

Jam amazed at how much more you are able to see and understand as you have been on this planet longer. I can see why people are the way they are and understand why. it's like they are wearing a map that I can read through their mannerisms...

I used to see these people with no light in their eyes and feel they were weak I think--of course I felt I was stronger--and I would think they just didn't have the desire to grow spiritually. So I would try to put my light out into the world but I did feel above them. Now I see how the light goes out by the things people experience and am not just filled with compassion as I understand and don't feel above them at all. [Is it because of their experience, or because of how they saw, felt, and reacted to experience, based on their purpose? ~c.] ...

I think it is hard to have a lot of compassion when you are young as when I was practicing The Way of Intelligence. As I didn't have the experience or years to learn why people are the way they are. Compassion is understanding--period. And there is no right or wrong.

I see how Life might have been in bliss for eons of time and when life decided to split itself to experience more, took on the challenge of both sides--light and dark--to see itself. And the consequence, if that is the right word, is to maintain balance so therefore the more compassion there is in the world, the more evil there will be too. I don't see it going away.

Look at all the jobs alone from the acts of evil. For me to come to a place where I could be at peace with it all and "judge not," I contemplated life's roles playing themselves out and you could choose any role, but you would have to play the balance of that as well. For instance if you [committed a crime against someone] you would have to [eventually] be the victim. Eventually you may want to play a different role and evolve into something else. [Do you have to actually play these "opposites" or just truly understand them? Does "understanding" them mean not just knowing but admitting that I am capable of playing any role anyone else has ever played? ~c.]

Taking it a step further, we just are all these roles as we are all of it. We are the [criminal] and the [victim] and all of it. I don't share this with too many people as they would think me crazy. Or just not relate at all. But I think you know what I am saying...

Love to you!

I think I do know what you're saying, and am hoping you won't mind if I show you how I see it just slightly differently. Do we actually have to play every role to understand it? This is the same problem I have with the quantum theory that ALL things that could ever happen to you ARE happening (somewhere, lol). If everything (or every) role is played by every person, where is uniqueness? Instead of a party, it is now a beehive? Life plays all roles in all places at all times... the individual human can pick and choose roles. I am not sure I have to play Hitler myself to understand Mother Teresa.

But right after I got your delightful email, I saw this movie, and please go rent it and see a really good presentation of your main idea:

"Unbreakable" featuring Bruce Willis and Samuel L. Jackson.

It's a masterpiece... AND... it does not necessarily show the Bigger Picture... And seeing the Bigger Picture teaches us a major principle of The Way of Intelligence... "Don't draw conclusions."
